Congratulations on completing the first step to your graduate education. You are joining a community of innovative scholars, researchers and faculty committed to ensuring your success. Below are some important steps you need to complete before you begin your studies at the University of Calgary.

1. Accept the Offer of Admission

In order to accept or decline the University of Calgary offer of admission, you must login into MyUofC using your eID and password. Under QuickLinks click Student Centre, then under the Admissions heading at the bottom of the page choose Accept/Decline.

2. Register for Courses

You may register for your approved courses through MyUofC. Contact your program to confirm the course schedule for your year and degree. All registration must be completed before the add/drop deadline, you may find this information for specific academic terms in the Graduate Calendar.

3. Pay Fees

Tuition and general fees can be paid online through online banking or in person at Enrolment Services. Tuition must be paid before the deadline or there may be holds placed on your account. Course-based students will also need to pay a $500 confirmation deposit. See our page on paying your fees for more information.

4. Apply for Student Housing

The application for residence at the University is separate from the application for admission. As there is limited availability for graduate student residence, you are encouraged to apply early. For further information or to apply contact Residence Services. The Student’s Union Off-Campus Housing Database can assist you in finding affordable off-campus housing in Calgary.
